MY TOP CAREER

Construction Managers Lexile Range 1280L-1520L

Contractors oversee construction-site work, often specializing in a particular type of project, such as residence, commercial buildings, or public works. Before starting a project, contractors estimate the cost of the project by studying building plans and looking at building materials and labor expenses. They then submit a bid to the individual or company that will pay for the project. If the bid is accepted, then the contractor begins the project. A contractor sometimes participates in the physical work but often supervises a number of subcontractors who are in charge of carpentry, plumbing, and other specific projects. General contractors ensure the delivery of materials and the completion of various tasks, keeping an eye on costs at all times. They communicate with their clients to inform them of the progress of each project.

The median Lexile level for this career is 1350L.
